Report on Faculty Orientation Program on “Program Outcome Attainment Process”

A one -day program was organized by the IQAC at Vignan Institute of Pharmaceutical Technology, Visakhapatnam on 10th December 2019.

The program outcomes are evolved through a process of discussion and deliberations chiefly coordinated by the department academic committee comprising of the Head of Department and Two senior members of the department faculty involving discussion/ inputs with/ from the following representation groups and in the spirit of larger objectives of under graduate programs in pharmaceutical sciences as laid out by PCI, State Higher Education Council, Affiliating University (JNTUK) and also from the programme specific criteria and Graduate attributes published by international professional bodies.

Program team:

Resource team: Dr. A. Venkata Ramana.

Professor & HoD - GMR Institute of Technology, Rajam.

Patron: Dr.Y.Srinvasa Rao, Principal

Convener: Mr. P.N.Mallikarjun, IQAC Coordinator

Number of participants: 27 members

Resource person overview:

Addressing the different learning needs and diversity of students, a student-centric teaching learning process is adopted by the faculty using ICT-based teaching learning strategies. Defining a clear course outcomes and schedule: the institute also initiated certificate and value-added courses for desirous students. The institution is equipped with modernized pedagogy and excellent infrastructure, which is upgraded periodically; we are leading on co-curricular and extracurricular fronts, industrial visits, training workshops and projects for multidimensional growth of the students. Spacious well equipped labs, 24-h Wi-Fi, computer facilities informatively decorated corridors encompass the progressive and environment-friendly campus. The library houses over 12,500 books from a wide range of subjects including international journals and magazine. Students receive hands-on expertise on sophisticated instruments like HPLC, FTIR-spectrophotometer, motorized stereotaxic instrument, operant-conditioning apparatus and ELISA reader.

About the program

The recent transition from faculty centric learning to student centric learning has paved a path for institutions to self-assess and derive their own assessment methodologies for improving the quality of education which in turn shall produce quality students for the betterment of the society. The universities and the engineering institutions have to follow certain guidelines specified by AICTE as well as discipline-specific accrediting bodies like ACM, IEEE, CSAB and others, to design curriculum. In addition, department recognizes the need for accountability to all of its stakeholders: students, faculty, staff, administration, parents, alumni, employers. Assessment data provides evidence to all of these groups that department is scrupulously monitoring its progress towards its goals.

Assessment is a teaching and management tool, designed to provide departments and units with quality information on which to improve learning and base organizational decisions. It is a process of defining a program or units mission, developing desired outcomes, continuously monitoring progress towards those outcomes, communicating results, and using those results to make improvements. Assessment is founded on a set of overall institutional outcomes, drawn from the institutions mission. Program level learning outcomes are developed from these outcomes; course level learning outcomes of the course. All are designed to achieve the institute's set outcomes.

The results of outcomes assessment from course and programs provide empirical data for departments to develop their own annual and long range plans. At the institutional level, this information, as well as information from assessment of institutional outcomes, is analyzed and coordinated within the scope of the institutions mission and its projected resources and priorities to develop its recommendations for resource allocation and long range planning

Schedule of activities

Day and Date: 10th December, 2019

Venue: VIPT Seminar Hall

Objectives of program:

- Defining the vision & mission and identify the Educational objectives of the program.
- Identifying the most important learning outcomes of the program in correlation to the Graduated Attributes.
- Ensure that students have adequate opportunities to achieve the set outcomes.
- Defining the process to assess progress towards the set outcomes.
- Develop and carry out the assessment plan.
- Collect, analyze, communicate and report on the finding.
